

Bill Withers
A Legend Returns

The Grit and Glam
of Memphis, TN

Ben Crenshaw's
Last Masters

GARDEN & GUN

SPRING
FASHION
Hits the Blues
Highway
p. 120

50

Perfect Southern Things

Funky Juke Joints, Hidden Gardens, Hot New Restaurants, and Lots More Reasons to Love the South Now

PADGETT
POWELL
Tracks
Down an Endangered Species

The Golden Age of SOUTHERN RUM

Merigold, Mississippi's
Po' Monkey's
Lounge

$5.99 DISPLAY UNTIL 05/18/15

0 5>

GARDENANDGUN.COM

Nº 23
COWBOYS ROAM THE FLORIDA FRONTIER

Florida: home of gators, theme parks, cowbirds, and...cowboys? Yes, cracker cowboys—so named for the sound their whips make—are still leading descendants of the cattle the Spanish introduced in the 1500s, when they settled the territory. Dr. William Fussard's Crescent J Ranch in St. Cloud has the world's largest herd of diminutive relative of the Texas longhorn. And on similar ranches across Florida, cowboys still roam the land where some of the first ranching started and where, as development creaches, it might also end.

Nº 24
THE ULTIMATE CHEESE BISCUIT

You may have tried cheese biscuits. But unless you live around Greenville,

HOOFING IT

Florida cracker cowboys herd cattle. Opposite: Louisiana's 610 Stompers storm Baton Rouge.

Grimesland, or Wilson, on the eastern side of I-95, you're probably not familiar with North Carolina's uniquely hedonistic variety. Across the area, cooks like those at Abrams restaurant in Tarboro bake fat knuckles of hoop cheddar in crispy casings of buttermilk biscuit dough. The result: golden-brown soft-balls that crumble on contact to reveal molten, delightfully greasy centers.

Nº 25
D.C.'S SECRET GARDEN TURNS SEVENTY-FIVE

Despite being the only woman among the American Society of Landscape Architects' founders, Beatrix Farrand preferred the more modest term landscape gardener. The title sums up the naturalistic approach she took when creating her Washington, D.C., masterpiece, Dumbarton Oaks, which opened to the public in 1940. Tucked away in Georgetown, the twenty-seven-acre garden is often overlooked amid the capital's many landmarks and monuments, but its low profile is also part of the enchantment. Walkways and stairways snake through stands of weeping cherry trees and past blooming collections of dogwoods, wisteria, and Virginia bluebells. And the entrance? You'll find it, fittingly, off of R Street down Lovers' Lane. doaks.org

Nº 26
THE GREAT WALL OF ALABAMA

On his wooded land just east of milepost 338 on the Natchez Trace Parkway near Florence, Tom Hendrix, after retiring from the nearby Ford plant, spent some twenty-five years assembling the Wichahpi Commemorative Stone Wall. Higher than six feet in some spots, it winds for more than a mile. Hendrix built the monument—stacking more

